

RESCUE

Finally, on 30 August 1916, help arrived for the men on Elephant Island after three failed attempts to reach the island due to heavy ice. The moment that the rescuers spotted the camp, the men on the island rushed to the shore, frantically waving and calling in joy. Shackleton shouted, "Are you all well?" and Wild answered, "We are all well, Boss," followed by the cheers of the whole crew. Shackleton had arrived just in time, as the men were weak and frail. By a miracle, Wild had kept hope alive.

